FIVE DIE IN CAR WRECK

FATHER Darkleaf

The first straw hat seen this year by Father Darkleaf was atop sheriff H. W. McKinney.

Jerry Burke told this one himself and we pass it on. He is an enthusiastic backer of Washington and Lee University. Recently he was in Charlottesville on business and W. L. was playing Virginia in baseball. The seventh inning came around and Virginia was leading by a score of 1 to 0. So——o—o Jerry settles down to the W. and L. player's bench and calls for a rally. Before he could get back to his seat— well the score was 4 to 1 in favor of W. and L. and there it was when the game ended.

While we're on baseball, we might mention that young Charlie James is playing a lot of third base for the Medical College of Va., team.

And that Woodrow Williams, the Pamplin flash, didn't stick with the Richmond Colts last spring, because the pitchers started throwing curves, and speaking about baseball, don't forget the BIG game between the "fats" and the "leans" here on May 3. Rev. R. E. Redding and Father Darkleaf are the rival playing captains.

Wreck Worst In History of Co. Investigation Called

W. D. ANDERSON

The most tragic automobile accident in the history of Appomattox county occured early yesterday morning when five lives were snuffed out, four of them in a fiery cauldron, as three cars piled up in wreckage at Spout Spring.

The dead are:

W. Dabney Anderson, of Vera, a rural mail carrier from Spout Springs and prominent citizen of this county.

Mrs. F. L. Mattox, 36, of Big Island, wife of the bank cashier at Big Island and mother of six children.

Addison L. Mattox, 30, bar inspassistent cashier in his father's bank and driver of one of the death cars.

Miss Bobbie Mattox, 19, second year pupil at Farmville State Teachers College.

Miss Margaret Mattox, 15, another daughter, and student at the Big Island high school.

Richard T. Hess, of 4511 Forest Hill evenue, Richmond, a salesman for the Underwood Typewriter Co., was the sole survivor of the wreck.

At seven A. M. the cars met in collision opposite the home of J. H. Cyrus, three hundred yards east of th Spout Spring depot. The site is on a slight evelation and curve.

According to a version of the crash told the Times Virginian by Notary Webb, W. T. Conner, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus and others and later substanciated by the preliminary investigation of Lt. Alec Bingham, of the state highway police, it appears that the Mattox car was bound for Farmville and the Hess and Anderson cars with the one occupant each, were Lynchburg bound. Just before reaching the scene of the wreck, according to Notary Webb, Mr. Anderson, driving a Ford sedan, passed Mr. Hess, who was driving a Plymouth sedan. The Mattox car, a Dodge sedan, and Mr. Anderson's car crashed and in a split second, the Richmond salesman's car piled into the other two.

In overturning, the Mattox car gas tank ripped open and burst into flame. The fire spread to envelop the entir scene.

John Cyrus rushed out into the highway and aided Mr. Hess in escaping and she two made a futile effort to extricate the occupants of the other cars.

Mr. Cyrus told this paper, onehalf hour after the tragedy, that he believed that the occupants of the Mattox car were all killed instantly. He said: I could see forms of people in their car, but they were motionless and already dead. We tried to get to the car doors, but my own clothes caught afire in the terrific heat. We then went to the Anderson car and pulled him out and carried him into our home."

All four of the occupants in the Mattox car were hideously burned beyond recognition, One of the badge, maybe Mrs. Mattox was buried under Mr. Anderson's car. It was not found until the blaze had been spread and nearby farmers and citizens arrived and pulled the car over with chains. At first it was feared that Mrs. Anderson might have been in the car with her husband.

Those who saw, and hundreds came as the alarm was spread, are a never to be forgotten sight of sheer horror.

Others have met death at or near this same spot. Mrs. Archie Moen was killed there in 1931, Lawrence Mann in 1932; Edgar Martin in 1932; and James Durgye, colored last November.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at his home near Vera, conducted by his pastor, Rev. O. G. Burnett.

He was born April 23, 1892. He had been carrying mail for fifteen years and 3 months.

He is survived by his widow, his mother, Mrs. Cornelia Anderson, Edgar and Richard Anderson, of Vera, brothers, and Mrs. Eliza Crabtree, of Tazewell, sister.

An investigation of the wreck is to be held hereby judge Horsley next Saturday.
